How to play Wedding, The LARP

Tess and Colin will be playing themselves with all of you playing a fictionalized version of their wedding guests. Use your imagination and don't feel hemmed in by who our family/friends are in real life: Maybe in this wedding story Colin has two gay dads and Tess has an cousin or friend that is a libertarian astronaut. Using freeform improv role playing, we will collaboratively tell the story of this rag tag assortment of people brought together for a wedding.

RULES OF THE GAME

1. Take a character card — if you do not like the character you were given you may trade once with someone next to you.
2. Fill out your name tag — write your character's name (make it up), Role (parent, friend, etc), and a "B" or "G" to indicate which side of the wedding your are on.
3. Get into character and say hi to the other guests! — You can act as little or as much as you want but please attempt to stay "in character" until the cake is cut.

YOUR CHARACTER

Each of you will be randomly given a character card with a Role (parent, friend, coworker, etc) and a Persona. The card may also have an Action that you must take as your character and may indicate that you have a Prop (found on the prop table).

Here are some questions to ask yourself to help get into the role:

- Is your character the same age or gender as you?
- How does your character know the Bride?
- How does your character know the Groom?
- What memorable story (funny, sad, happy) does your character remember about the Bride or Groom?
- [When you meet another person] Does your character know the other person's character? If so how?

As always follow the first rule of improv "Say Yes."
